Introduction

RREAC consists of representatives from various community groups who are consumers of, or have a strong vested interest in, rural and remote education in Western Australia.

Members of the Council are appointed by the Minister for Education. A list of members for this reporting period is provided at section 1.10.

The Rural and Remote Education Advisory Council (RREAC) was established in 1997 to provide advice to the then Minister for Education and Training with evidenced-based and solutions-focussed strategic advice on educational issues and developments in rural and remote areas of the Western Australian. In May 2006 the Council underwent a restructure, including the appointment of rural Members of Parliament as the Chair and Deputy Chair. New Terms of Reference were constructed to provide a more strategic focus.

The restructured RREAC separated the voice of the 'community /consumer' of education and training in rural and remote areas from the funders/providers of these services. The membership of the formal council includes the Cabinet endorsed-Ministerially appointed representatives and agents of the community and consumer interests. Providers and funders of education and training services are ex-officio members of the council. The RREAC secretariat comprises a part-time Principal Executive Officer and a part-time Administration Assistant.

In 2009-10 the then Minister for Education, the Hon Dr Elizabeth Constable MLA, reconstituted the council: The Terms of Reference were reviewed, new members were appointed and specific 'Minister's Directions' were issued prior to the first meeting of the reconstituted council being held on the 6 August 2010.

The Hon Minister Peter Collier MLC was appointed Minister of Education in 2012. The Minister attended several RREAC meetings during 2013 and encouraged short self-initiated reports on rural, regional and remote matters.

In 2012 the two groups 'community /consumer' of education and training in rural and remote areas and funders/providers of these services unanimously agreed to meet together as it provides the opportunity for open discussion and feedback.

Following the State elections in 2013 Cabinet approved the re-appointment by the Minister for Education of the Hon Brian Charles Ellis MLC, Member for the Agricultural Region as Chairperson of the RREAC for an indefinite term and the appointment of the Hon Jacqui Boydell MLC, Member for the Mining and Pastoral Region as Deputy Chairperson of the RREAC, for an indefinite term.

Functions of the Rural and Remote Education Advisory Council

RREAC's Terms of Reference for this reporting period were:

- To provide specific strategic advice on the education services that give senior secondary students in rural and remote areas equitable opportunities for compulsory participation in education and training.
- To advise about rural and remote community and consumer interests in education and training.
- To ensure strategic advice is provided from a cross-sectoral perspective across the schools, training and higher education sectors and encompasses both the public and private provision.

Overview 2013

RREAC met on five occasions in 2013 which included a meeting in the Great Southern Region.

In March 2013 RREAC finalised and forwarded to the Minister for Education its report on the Kimberley Regional Meeting that was centred in Broome. Three key recommendations that focused on the role Aboriginal and Islander Education Officers and technology were included. Recommendations within the report endorsed by the Minister have been actioned with responses received from all education sectors/providers. RREAC continues to progress these actions.

The Chair, Deputy Chair and Councillors of RREAC affirmed that, as part of the Council's core business, the opportunity to experience first-hand education in a regional context is paramount. RREAC investigated a number of options for its 2013 regional meeting. Investigation confirmed that the Great Southern Region (centre Albany) offered diverse opportunities in terms of regional development, education provided by a range of systems and sectors. The Great Southern Region offered innovative opportunities that were different from the other regions. Great Southern Region from a regional context.

As an innovation RREAC worked with the Aboriginal Education and Training Council (AETC) to co-host this regional meeting.

The purpose of meeting with selected stakeholders was to:

- Verify the work RREAC completed on early childhood education and care, the delivery and access to higher education and the future uses of technology in the delivery of education;
- Ensure that Council members were attuned to the many issues and challenges facing regional students, staff, families, communities, and the strategies employed to overcome disadvantage and maximise outcomes; and to
- Expose the Council members first hand to the varied educational environment in the Albany region (early childhood; primary; secondary; tertiary; agricultural education; alternative education for disaffected youth) and enable them to receive reports directly from those engaged in the delivery of education on the many issues and challenges facing regional and remote students, staff, families, communities and the strategies employed to overcome disadvantage and maximise outcomes.
- Host the 2013 regional meeting in partnership with the Aboriginal Education and Training council in WA to share information between councils and to gain further insight into the issues, challenges and successes facing Aboriginal students, families and communities within the Great Southern Region.

RREAC is currently finalising its report on the Great Southern Regional Meeting for the Minister for Education.

Outcomes 2013

The following report was presented to the Minister during 2013:

Rural and Remote Education Advisory Council Regional Meeting in Broome

The Chair, Deputy Chair and Councillors of RREAC affirmed that, as part of the Council's core business, the opportunity to experience first-hand education in a regional context is paramount. RREAC investigated two possibilities, the first incorporating the Geraldton wider area and the second the Kimberley region. The Kimberley region was selected as it offered more opportunities in terms of regional development, education provided by a range of systems and sectors and, the opportunity to experience, in real time, education training in the remote context. As well, it enabled RREAC to consider delivery of education and training to indigenous students and the long term demands on educational provision in an area which has projected significant growth and development.

Endorsement of Regional Report recommendations:

The Hon Peter Collier MLC, Minister for Education; endorsed the three (3) recommendations put forward by RREAC: These included:

That consideration is given to:

1. The critical role Aboriginal Education Workers (AEW's), Aboriginal Liaison Officers (ALO's) and Aboriginal and Islander Education Officers (AIEO's) play well beyond their support to teaching staff, including: examining ways in which this work can be better acknowledged, supported and experience and professionalism shared across communities; embracing, fostering and developing Aboriginal leadership in the school; enhancing quality teaching and learning programs around Two Way practises to cater for English as a Second Language (ESL) needs of the learner; developing respectful partnerships with the community around their priorities including attendance.
2. RREAC's support for the tri state attendance pilot and the need to extend it beyond pilot status.
3. The criticality of technology to support enhanced curriculum delivery and professional development to education professionals in the Kimberley.

RREAC is progressing these recommendations.

Outlook 2014

Following discussion at the RREAC meeting held on 30 November 2013 RREAC Council determined that it would focus on the following priorities:

Attraction and Retention of Quality Teachers

Focus on student outcomes and the attraction and retention of quality teachers (RREAC will refer back to the Twomey Report as a starting point)

Support for graduate teachers in rural and remote areas

Enabling pre-service teachers to experience life and work in rural and remote locations

Remote Aboriginal students/staff/community partnerships - ability of teachers / staff to help build partnerships between community / school and students (in respect to this RREAC will work closely with the Western Australian Aboriginal Training and Education Council).

Attracting and retaining quality school leaders

Building leadership / capacity in schools to bridge the link between school and community

Funding cuts implications for rural and remote schools and students, (for example: staffing, capacity building, support for graduates, enabling pre-service experiences etc.)

Vocational Education and Training in Schools

Vocational Education and Training in Schools (VETiS) represents a suite of programs that enable students to undertake accredited training whilst enrolled at school. In accordance with the nationally-agreed definition, VET in Schools programs: are undertaken by school students as part of their senior secondary studies; and contribute to a nationally recognised vocational education and training (VET) qualification within the Australian Qualification Framework (AQF)

Vocational education and training in schools (VETiS) was launched in 1997, with the primary objectives of increasing school student retention and improving the transition between senior secondary education and post-school employment and training options.

In recent years, VETiS has been seen as a strategy of addressing industry skill shortages. As such, VETiS now has the important focus of leading to an occupational outcome.

It is believed that regional students are disadvantaged in both access to and quality of VET in School programs. The main issues are:

- thin markets (small numbers of students who want to access a particular qualification), therefore financially not viable for the RTO and or the school
- inability to offer a range of programs due to a lack of qualified staff
- VET in School programs that don't give students a realistic workplace experience, and therefore don't give the students skills that reflect current workplace practices
- accommodation and transport
- a suite of qualifications that are on offer that may not lead to employment outcomes
- the place and role of VET: To consider VET's role in the tertiary education sector, world of work and community

Aboriginal Education

The Minister for Education noted that Aboriginal education was a priority area. As such RREAC has embedded Aboriginal Education within the contexts of the previous two priority area.

Action: Research into VET in Schools to highlight the issues impacting on regional students, and then investigating models and identifying solutions that alleviate barriers (what successful models in other states; looking at good practice; what skills are required in the bush?).

Financial Provision

The expenses of RREAC are provided from within the annual budget of Department of Education Services (DES).

RREAC has a separate line item within DES's accounts.

For the financial year 2012/2013 RREAC was allocated a budget of $131 000 including salary costs.

Member's Re-numeration

No RREAC members receive a salary or sitting fee

Travel and accommodation allowances are provided to non-public sector members who live beyond the metropolitan area.

Travel is by air where possible (cheapest fare). A rebate is provided for those Council members who need to drive to meetings from country locations based on the size of the motor of the vehicle.

Executive

As part of the 2010 restructure the Council was provided with two part time officers – principal executive officer and administrative support.

RREAC's staff provides support to DES on a needs basis.

Financial Statement

RREAC reports under the Financial Management and Accountability Act 1997, through the Department of Education Services' Annual Report and Financial Statement.
